"God Save the King"

"FRITHJOF"

The story of Frithjof the Bold and Ingeborg the Fair is told in "Frithjof's Saga," a poem in twenty-four cantos, by Esaias Tegner, published in 1820.

The hero, Frithjof, is son to Thorsten Vikingsson, who, though King Bele's best warrior and chosen friend, is of lowly origin. Frithjof the Strong and Bold dares to love Fair Ingeborg, daughter of his king and descendant of great Odin. Bele looks kindly on young Frithjof's love, but death takes from the youth at once a monarch and a friend. When Frithjof subsequently demands the hand of Ingeborg from Helge, son and successor of Bele, he is rejected with scorn. Later old King Ring, a mighty monarch of the North, would make fair Ingeborg his queen, but Helge, influenced by soothsayers, sends a refusal, accompanied by a taunting message from brother Halfdan to "Old Grey-beard." King Ring, incensed, declares war against the brothers, and Ingeborg is sent for safety to the vale of Baldur, the god of innocence and virtue. While in the sacred grove the maiden receives a visit from her lover, the joy of which is followed by the fear that she has angered the gods by keeping a love-tryst in that holy place. At a council of war, assembled at Bele's cairn, Frithjof again demands from Helge the hand of Ingeborg, in return for which he offers his best aid in the impending battle. Helge again repels him, and forces him to make the fatal admission that he has visited Ingeborg in the sacred grove. He thereupon denounces him as a profaner of temples, and orders him to do penance for his sacrilege by sailing to the Orkneys to wring from fierce Earl Agantyr long-withheld tribute. Frithjof tries to persuade Ingeborg to fly with him, but in vain. Giving her his arm-ring, he departs, promising to return and make her his bride.

Borne through his perilous voyage by his charmed ship "Ellida," Frithjof returns at length to his native land to find his estates laid waste with fire and sword, and the fair Ingeborg given in marriage to victorious King Ring. He learns that at the marriage ceremony the cowardly Helge tore from his sister's arm her lover's ring, and hung it upon the arm of Baldur's image. Frithjof, furious, seeks out the King whilst he is in the act of offering sacrifice at Baldur's pyre. He flings Agantyr's tribute full in Helge's face, and, hastily snatching at the arm-ring, he overturns the huge idol upon the sacred fire. The flames lap it about, and, leaping upward with angry roar, spread to the temple and the sacred grove, which are soon reduced to ashes.

Frithjof is now shunned by all as a perpetrator of sacrilege; he is banished from his country, and, sailing away in the "Ellida," he devotes himself to a life of wild adventure. The hero's troubled life is ultimately crowned with happiness. After many years he returns to his native land, and succeeds in gaining the goodwill of King Ring, who at his death bequeaths him his kingdom and his queen.

INTRODUCTION

Scene I.

Frithjof's Return

Recitative.

How bravely o'er the floods so bright,
Ellida flies to shore now in sight!
Although the king with demon spell
Invoked the horrid goblin brood,
And unloosed the wings of the tempest,
My Northland courage bore me
Through ardent strife
To glory's height;
From mighty Jarl the tribute I obtained!
I greet thee gladly, Baldur's grove,
Where oft by break of night
Hope filled my heart with sweet delight!
My Ingeborg, but where art thou now?
Beloved maiden, art thou true to me?

See, I vie with the winds and their heavenly train.
Ellida, O hasten and fly o'er the main.

Chorus.

Oh, 'tis delight when the land afar appeareth,
And from the hearth of thy home beloved
The smoke curls upwards
And thou art near to childhood's scenes
For ever dear.

Solo—Frithjof.

On the tomb of my father I planted the lime-tree,
Is the delicate stem still alive?
Give, earth, thy growth,
And thou O heaven, send fostering dew.
Oh, 'tis delight!

THE ROYAL VICTORIAN LIEDERTAFEL

Chorus.

Sadly the Skald walks before the train,
Pale sits the bride on the coal black palfrey;
The angry Norna her arrow darteth;
She rules the mortals,
As their lot is cast.
From thunder-clouds ruin falls at last.

Solo, Ingeborg—and Chorus.

My heart, with sorrow overflowing,
Heeds not the flowers entwined with my ringlets;
For ever away from my home I go.
By my brother forced to wed his foe!
And endless woe in my bosom burneth,
But Bele's daughter pity spurneth!
Yet bear to Frithjof greetings from Ingeborg!
Great is my grief, but I do not hate.
All-father judges
I bear my fate.

Scene III.

Frithjof's Revenge—Temple in Flames—Curse

Chorus of Priests.

Midnight sun on the mountain burns,
Red like blood appearing,
And through the strange mysterious light
Helge's train is nearing.
Lo, he comes, while the glare is spread,
Splendid crown adorns his head,
Helge, mighty monarch!

Recitative—Frithjof.

Go to Hela's dark abode,
Seek ye there the mighty rover;
Slain upon the horse he rode,
Helge's life is over!

Chorus.

Woe! Oh! wicked deed!

Frithjof.

Hush, wretched priests with gory knives,
Moonlight's pallid princes!
Hush! or tremble for your lives,
Long our blades have thirsted!
Where my father rests,
Where my childhood passed,
Nought save a ruin I found aghast!
And sold to the foe my beloved bride.
The armlet, which to her I left,
Behold, now the God wears it proudly,
And she is bereft!
Ah, Baldur! is this thy valiant deed?
By theft this armlet was given to thee!
Thou must, O Baldur, restore it to me!
How dar'st thou hold this ring in thy keeping,
Which once my Ingeborg blessed with weeping?
No longer on thine arm it shall rest!
My hope, my joy, thou could'st destroy,
But, mind! not me shall thou decoy!

Chorus—Priests and People.

Woe! he tugs with all his might at the ring
—O fright!
Ah! the God, now filled with wrath,
Midst the flames is rushing,
And the consecrated hearth
By his weight is crushing.
Fane in flames!
Pour water on!
The waves of the sea bring hither!
Lo! clouds of smoke are bursting forth,
Morning winds blow from the North!
How the flames are glaring!
What availeth human might!
Now from branch to branch they spring
Through the combat daring!
Blazing flames in the grove abound,
Onward like rivers flowing,
Sunlight smileth,
But fiord and sound
Blood-red with fire are glowing,
Woe! Woe! Woe!

Priests.

Mischief bringer! malediction on thy head!
accurs'd!

People and Priests.

Mount, smoke, and upwards to heaven
ascending,
Valhalla enter, Valhalla enter.
Cry to the Gods, who o'er earth are bending.
And thou, O flame, the deed proclaim,
Fly, and proclaim to the Gods the accursed deed!

Frithjof's Followers

Ashes our temple soon will be;
Frithjof from his home must flee!
Happy he who departs not for ever!

Scene IV.

Frithjof Goes Into Exile

Solo—Quartette

Sun in the sky
Now mounteth high,
The winds are blowing
And gently flowing,
The waves advance
In joyful dance.

Chorus.

Sadly Frithjof goes his way;
See, he weepeth, while morning gloweth!

Solo—Frithjof and Chorus.

World's grandest region thou mighty North,
From thy dominions I'm driven forth,
Within thy borders I lov'd to dwell!
Midsummer sun, fare thee well!
My love is foiled, my roof-tree rent!
With honour soiled, in exile sent!
Cheerless is my soul within me,
Hopeless, I must bear my lot.
Ye rugged mountains where heroes dwell.
And Thor commandeth clouds and winds;
Ye azure lakes that I love so well,
Ye woods and brakes, fare ye well!

Scene V.

Ingeborg's Lament

Solo—Ingeborg.

Storms wildly roar!
Billows break madly upon the shore.
Would 'neath the sod I were lying,
Winds o'er me sighing!
Sad and opprest,
Thee I did watch, flying sail in the west!
Onward with Frithjof thou glidest,
With him abidest.
Falcon, beloved! thee he left here;
Falcon for his sake to me thou art dear.
Shake not thy pinions, stay near me,

O, why should'st thou fear me?
Here on his hand,
Worker on the canvas, thou proudly shall stand,
Silver thy pinions unfolden;
Thy claws shall be golden,
Thou darling bird!
Sit on my shoulder, and list to my word!
When I'm no more
He will come hither, and his heart will be sore;
Greet from me Frithjof,
Who loves me, and never forgets me.

Scene VI.

Frithjof On the Sea

Chorus—Frithjof's Followers.

Now he crossed the floods of the salt desert
waste,
Far off like a falcon he flew!
But for warriors on board he wrote maxims and rules!
List to the laws of his crew!

Frithjof and Chorus.

On this deck raise no tent,
And ashore do not sleep;
Within houses the foe lurks for thee!

On thy shield sleep, Viking;
Thy sword in thy hand;
Let the heavens thy canopy be.
Now hold high your lances—
Your lances hold high—
Our banners unfold ye,
The triumph is nigh.
To climes of the south we shall wander.
When hurricanes rage,
Hoist the canvas on high!
Let them come as they may;
He who flinches must die.
Rise, rise, unfold ye our banners!

(a) Holy night, oh soothe my breast
With thy solemn tranquil calm;
Give the weary wand'rer rest,
O'er his sorrows shed thy balm.
Stars brightly o'er me gleaming,
From azure fields are beaming,
They set my soul a-dreaming
Of rest above.
Hallowed sounds fall on my ear,
Wafted on the nightwind's sighs;
Murmurings from some blissful sphere,
Echoes from love's paradise.
On high my glances turning,
Where heaven's stars are burning,
I dream with fervent yearning
Of peace and love.

(b) If thou are sleeping, maiden,
Awake, awake, and open thy door,
'Tis the break of day, and we must away
O'er the meadow and mount and moor.
Wait not to find thy slippers,
But come with thy naked feet,
We shall have to pass thro' the dewy
grass
And the waters wide and fleet.

(c) I've never sailed the Amazon,
I've never reached Brazil!
But the "Don" and the "Magdalena,"
They can go there when they will.
Ah!
Yes, weekly from Southampton,
Great steamers, white and gold,
Go rolling down to Rio,
And I'd like to roll to Rio
Some day before I'm old!
I'd like to roll to Rio
Some day before I'm old!

I've never seen a jaguar,
Nor yet an armadill—
O dillowing in his armour,
And I s'pose I never will. Ah!
Unless I go to Rio
These wonders to behold,
Go rolling down to Rio!
Roll really down to Rio!
Oh, I'd love to roll to Rio
Some day before I'm old!
I'd love to roll to Rio
Some day before I'm old!

Bandit's Chorus

From "Ernani"

with

A.B.C. ORCHESTRA

... THE ROYAL VICTORIAN LIEDERTAFEL

All welcome the bowl!
A full flowing soul.
Unfathomed by care!
What boots it the bandit,
If hunted and branded,
So wine be his share!
To play, sirs!

Treasure is merely a pleasure
That flies soon as come!
And play hath a duty,
It charmeth when beauty
Inconstant may roam.

Thrice welcome the bowl!
Whose glorious soul
Doth bleed at our call!
The bowl, the bowl,
Whose glorious soul, sirs,
Doth bleed at our call.

Hernani, still pensive?
Quick thought grows apprehensive
To view his cheek so blanch'd
Where's life's tide hath motion.
On Death's shoreless ocean
Our one bark is launched.

To give, then, thy willing
Immediate fulfilling,
Ere will'd we prepare.
The hawk's speed e'en tarries
In hitting her quarries
If ours ye compare.

Come, welcome the bowl,
Whose glorious soul
Can drown all thy care!

Good Night Song

(Composed for the Royal Victorian Liedertafel by E. N. Hocking)
